KOTEL Conference

17.3.2016 – Papers from CEEES

1. Etienne Cavro INTESPACE – ASTE : “ Life profiles and derived test specifications for electronic components – Application in defence and aeronautic industries “

Abstract :

“Electronic components developed in many industries (defence, transportation, aeronautic) are exposed to vibratory environments that may be more or less severe. The need for a high level of reliability is therefore a major key point and special attention shall be paid to the accurate estimation of the vibration level a component must withstand during its whole life. For that purpose, the test tailoring methodology is of prime interest as it enables to build the life profile representative for the vibratory environment undergone by a given component during its life and to derive an adequate random vibration test specification covering the life of the item in terms of fatigue damage. Applications in defence and aeronautic industries will illustrate this presentation.“
